ARIZONA'S SIX TAKEN UP.

The first contest taken up by the committee to-day was over the six delegates from Arizona, all having been elected at large, as there is but one Congress district in the State.

The delegates to the State convention, the first of the Republican party in Arizona as a State, were nearly all named by the county committees, and the Roosevelt forces say that the Taft people, through the operation of the credentials committee, controlled the convention. The temporary roll of State delegates showed sixty-eight for Taft and twenty-five for Roosevelt. The latter objected to this preliminary roll and held their own convention to select six delegates, although they presented no contests to the credentials convention to select six delegates, although they presented no contests to the credentials convention to select six delegates, although they presented no contests to the credentials convention to select six delegates, although they presented no contests to the credentials convention to select six delegates, although they presented no contests to the credentials convention to select six delegates, although they presented no contests to the credentials convention to select six delegates, although they presented no contests to the credentials convention to select six delegates, although they presented no contests to the credentials convention to select six delegates, although they presented no contests to the credentials convention to select six delegates, although they presented no contests to the credentials convention of the county continued in the four personal ties must be indulged in and the state of the first party organizations until it was trick as the unit of representation in the state of the first party organizations until it was trick as the unit of representation in the state of the first party organizations until it was trick as the unit of representation in the state of the first party organizations until it was trick as the unit of representation in the state of the first party org

THE LOUISIANA MIXUP. THE LOUISIANA MIXUP.

The third contest taken up was over the six delegates at large and the delegates from each of the seven Congress districts in Louisiana. There were three sets of delegates at large and three sets in some and two sets in others of the Congress districts.

Some months ago the national committee and a second committee in Louisians.

mittee sent a sub-committee into Louisiana to aid the Republican factions in getting together and all the factions agreed to together and all the factions agreed to enter a State convention suggested by the sub-committee. But the Wight-Williams, or lily white, faction left the convention controlled by the Hebert-Loisel-Warmouth, or black and tan. faction, objecting to the recognition of the colored voters, and held a convention of their own which split over Taft and Roosevelt.

Then the Wight crowd selected a set of Roosevelt delegates at large and the Williams adherents named six Taft delegates at large. The Hebert-Warmouth convention also named six Taft delegates at large.

Despite the fact there are not enough Despite the fact there are not enough Republican voters in Louisiana to get a party column on the bullot, the three factions fought for recognition before the national committee as though the election of the next President was at stake. The Wight and the Williams factions voted as one before the committee in opposing the Hebert-Loisel-Warmouth faction and only differed on the question of voting for Roosevelt or Taft. Upon motion of Harry S. New of Indiana the six delegates at large representing the Rebert-Loisel-Warmouth organization were scated as they had abided by the agreement made with the sub-committee of the national committee which aimed to have the colored men recognized in the to have the colored men recognized in the colitics of the State.
